16:00 – 18:00

Site Visit 1: Affordable Housing – Karl-Marx-Hof Housing Estate

Bus transfer provided, pick-up at 16:00 from Bus Stop Burgtheater

Karl-Marx-Hof is a prominent example of early 20th-century social housing in Vienna. Completed in 1930, it was one of the largest housing complexes of its time and remains a significant architectural and historical landmark.

Karl-Marx-Hof was constructed as one of the flagship projects of Vienna's ambitious "Red Vienna" housing programme, which aimed to provide affordable and high-quality housing to the city's working class. This programme was driven by the Socialist government, reflecting its commitment to improving living conditions for its citizens.

Beyond providing affordable apartments, municipal housing facilities included elements of social infrastructure. As the poster child of municipal housing, Karl-Marx-Hof featured a wide range of social amenities, including a library, washhouses, and kindergartens. Additionally, its expansive green spaces underscore the symbolic significance of the facility, creating an almost palace-like atmosphere.

Site Visit 4: From Brownfield to Mixed-Use Neighbourhood – Nordbahnhof Quartier

Bus transfer provided, pick-up at 14:00 from Bus Stop Burgtheater

An urban development area for 20,000 people has emerged at Vienna's North Station, which is leading the way with modern examples of affordable housing. This is an approximately 85-hectare freight yard area of the former North Railway Station, which is no longer required for rail operations, and on which a new district has been gradually being built since the 1990s. "Bike City", "Living at the Park" and "Bike & Swim" are some of the programmes that have been implemented here. In addition to the already built-up area around Rudolf-Rednar-Park and the Austria Campus, the last development areas "Wohnallee mit Bildungscampus" (Residential Avenue with Education Campus) and "Freie Mitte – Vielseitiger Rand" (Free Center – Versatile Edge) will be realized by 2026. The heart of the Nordbahnhofviertel is the "Free Center" as a centrally located, tangible urban wilderness, in which nature has regained its freedom between old track systems and historical buildings.

14:00 – 16:30

Site Visit 5: Flood Protection and Inner-City Recreational Area – Danube Island

Bus transfer provided, pick-up at 14:00 from Bus Stop Burgtheater

The 21-kilometer-long Danube Island is not only the favourite recreational region of the Viennese, but it also functions as the city's flood mitigation system. The Danube Island can be reached from the city center in just a few minutes via the subway lines U1 and U6. An expansive network of trails invites the athletically inclined to hike, jog, cycle and skate. Bathing areas with flat beaches as well as natural bathing sites, a water slide, a surfing school, a water ski lift and a boat rental service offer plenty of opportunities for fun on and in the water.

14:00 – 16:30 Lee Kuan Yew World City Prize Network Convening Session

UIV Urban Innovation Vienna GmbH

This session brings together representatives of the member cities of the LKYWCP Network to connect and discuss how cities can reclaim space for people and balance sustainability with vibrant public life. The Network members will also explore opportunities for further collaboration to exchange and advance knowledge on building liveable and sustainable cities.
